CHEMICAL INDUSTRY SECURITY SEMINAR FOR POST 9/11 ERA HELD AT UNION COLLEGE

AMIC-Group, Inc., a leader in homeland security exercise, training and development based in Albany, New York, was applauded today by New York State Senator Michael Balboni for their efforts to combat terrorism and to strengthen the security of the chemical industry.

The seminar was held Thursday, April 28, 2005 in Schenectady, New York at Union College to address the challenges to the chemical industry's security and the real and perceived threats confronting this vital economic sector in the post-9/11 world.

“This event was an overall success,” said Lt. Colonel Robert Domenici (ret), President of AMIC-Group. “The seminar provided an important understanding of the real threats facing us in today’s world.”

According to Domenici the following issues were addressed at the seminar: detection; deterrence; and prevention of terrorist acts. In addition, the seminar focused on response and recovery from real threats including: Security Challenges and Associated Regulatory/Legislative Issues to the Chemical Industry; Security Actions taken by Industry Response and Contingency Planning for Real Incidents; and Security Considerations with regard to the Transportation Industry.
